To: Assistant Secretary General for Political Affairs
From: J. Inan.

Mr. Inan and I feel that it would be preferable to show this document in its present form to the Rapporteurs and to leave it to them to suggest any further changes with regard to form and content.

2. The requirement was for a digest of opinions by statesmen and writers. Whether these are expressed in books or articles is immaterial. The arrangement of the items by alphabetical order divided according to each of the four sub-groups should be sufficient for convenient reference.

The authors of the Digest make the above observation.
What do you think?

There is a clear imbalance between the importance of books and articles but the S. G. (why the rapporteurs?), who has expressed the wish to see it again, will decide tonight.
